Lee Business School
BSBA, Real Estate & Urban Economics, 2019-2020

Because the real-estate industry accounts for more than 72 percent of all nongovernmental tangible assets in the United States, the real-estate industry has a significant impact on the public and business sectors both domestically and internationally. A major in real estate and urban economics gives students a unique background in urban planning and land-use regulation, real-estate law, real-estate finance, real-estate investments, and appraisal. Students with this major pursue careers in corporate real-estate development, institutional real-estate portfolio management and investment, real-estate development and construction, property management, or appraisal and consulting.

Suggested Academic Plan

This is a suggested academic plan. Students may make adjustments and consult the current Undergraduate Catalog for course prerequisites.
